Cup and Chalice

THE REVISED English translation of the Mass has replaced the word cup with chalice in most instances throughout the Eucharistic Prayers. Catholics who are used to hearing the priest say of Jesus, “he took the cup,” hear instead “he took the chalice.”

To some, the word sounds wrong. In English, chalice summons up an image of a precious vessel, studded with jewels. Jesus surely had nothing like that at the Last Supper when he shared his blood.

There are several reasons for the change. One is the desire to use words that distinguish the articles we use at church from the ones we have at home. Another is to recognize the ceremonial nature of the meal Jesus shared. Furthermore, the same word appears both in the words spoken aloud and in the words that describe the action of the priest. Since we use the written word chalice to describe the vessel actually sitting on the altar, we use the same word in the spoken text about the Last Supper.

Of course, the word cup could have been used more broadly in these instances, and some would have preferred that. However, the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments in Rome believes that the word chalice sets a better tone for this part of the celebration.

Nonetheless, one of the revised Memorial Acclamations (“When we eat this bread”) still uses the word cup. This is partly because that acclamation is nearly a direct quotation from 1 Corinthians 11:26, where the word cup occurs in lectionary translations, and partly because this acclamation belongs to the people. The translators tried to minimize the changes to those parts of the revised words.

NATIONAL EUCHARISTIC REVIVAL

June 11, 2022 – Pentecost 2025

“What more can be given us Christians? [The Father] gives us His Son, who is of His own substance; His Son who is begotten from all eternity in the splendor of His glory; His Son who is the sole object of His most tender joy. He allows this most adorable Son to be sacrificed and to die upon a cross for us. ... But divine love goes further. It is not enough to have given Him in the adorable mystery of the Incarnation by becoming man and dying for us upon a cross. This same God comes to us every day under the appearance of bread and wine in the august Sacrament of the Eucharist in order to unite Himself most intimately to our hearts: to attend to us, to sustain us, and to share His most tender delights.”

St. Anthony Mary Claret (1807 – 1870)
